

Hurricane Michael Recovery Assistance with Restoring Your Power

Do you need assistance restoring power to your home because of electrical repairs needed to your home?

Residents in areas impacted by Hurricane Michael may be eligible to receive assistance to repair their home's electrical connection to restore power. Utility providers are responsible for the wire or service line to the electric meter, but often homeowners may have damage to equipment or lines from the service line to their home. The Florida Department of Economic Opportunity (DEO) Community Action Agency partners administer the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) that may be able to help.

Eligibility Requirements

You may be eligible for the LIHEAP program if you were impacted by Hurricane Michael and your household does not exceed 150 percent of the poverty level. www.floridajobs.org/liheap

How to Apply

Through a network of Community Action Agencies, the funds are used to assist households with home energy assistance. The Community Action Agency will hire a licensed electrician to repair the home's electrical connections. Applicants will apply to the program through one of the nonprofit agencies listed below.
